Triage Services Makes a Splash at European ATMs 2008

UK technology group launches its unique ATM refurbishment service at Europe's largest ATM Conference

22nd May 2008 — Triage Services, the UK's leading independent provider of repair solutions to the IT industry, celebrated its first successful appearance at European ATMs 2008, held in London on the 14th and 15th April 2008. At the exhibition accompanying the conference, Triage Services showcased its unique ATM refurbishment and repair service offerings.

The event, jointly organised by ATMIA Europe and Retail Banking Research, brought together over 200 banks, independent deployers, network processors, vendors and service providers to discuss industry issues, and featured a presentation from John Shepherd-Barron, inventor of the ATM, at the conference's gala dinner. A key discussion theme at this year's conference was the benefit of outsourcing all ATM-related activities – including deployment and maintenance - to partners.

Exhibiting for the first time at the event, Triage Services launched its specialist ATM managed service portfolio - which includes a pioneering refurbishment service that enables deployers to maximise uptime from their ATM estate - to a highly receptive audience.

“Our unique ATM refurbishment methodology — which includes incorporating latest manufacturer revisions — enables significant returns on investment for operators with increased field uptime, which in turn generates higher revenue-per-unit,” Gary Moinet, Managing Director, explains.

“This approach has helped propel us into our current position as the UK’s leading independent provider of specialist services to the ATM market place,” he concludes.
